Assembly Fails To Ratify Child Labor Measure

Assembly the support of the members of the two parties which it received in the state Senate. Had it done so it would of course have been easily ratified.

"The record speaks for itself. The people of the state will form their own judgment on that record."

Second Annual Rejection

Assembly rejection was the second in as many years, the House voting 110 to 35 against the measure when Democrats were in control in 1935.

Nearly two score Democrats and Republicans rose to speak in the tense Assembly chamber, jammed to capacity with spectators. In the four hour discussion that preceded yesterday's vote.

Democratic Assembly Leader Irwin Steingut, summing up for the administration forces, said "It is unthinkable that our state will fail to ratify the amendment."

"We owe it to the children of the state," he said. "We owe it to the honor and dignity of our people to ratify this amendment which transcends party and political lines and must be considered as a necessary social and humanitarian measure."

"I cannot get myself to believe that this amendment contemplates the abridgment of any of the natural and implied powers of the home, nor yet a curtailment of the sacred prerogatives of parents in relation to their children, and their children's spiritual, physical and mental growth."

Republican Floor Leader Irving M. Ives termed the measure "non-partisan," but voted against it.

"I assume that, in opposing the proposition before us, I may be accused of being a Bourbon and a Tory and reactionary," Ives said. "If to defend the sanctity of the home one must be a Bourbon, I am then a Bourbon. If to fight for religious liberty one must be a Tory, I am then a Tory. If to uphold academic freedom one must be reactionary, I am then reactionary."

Good-bye, MR. BUMPS!

Sometimes we have to run a telephone wire under a rug or carpet. Ordinary round wire makes a bump. As people don't like bumps in their rugs, we have developed a special flat, ribbon-like wire. It's only an eighth of an inch thick and you aren't likely to feel it, much less see it, under the rug.

A trifle, perhaps, but good service is built on the perfection of trifles. "Trifles make perfection; and perfection is no trifle," said Michelangelo.

Telephone engineers are constantly trying to find a better way of making and doing things, so that telephone service will become increasingly valuable in helping you reach anybody, anywhere, any time—quickly, clearly and at low cost. New York Telephone Company.

WOMEN HELD IN HAMMER SLAYING

Mrs. Bessie Bartovsky, 45, accused of bludgeoning her 75-year-old mother-in-law to death with a hammer, fainted three times en route to the lineup at police headquarters. Police finally cancelled the formality of her appearance as she screamed she would "rather die" than face the detectives. The accused woman (center) is shown as she was taken to a Brooklyn police station where she was booked on a charge of murder. (Associated Press Photo)

Mayor Unable to See Lester Herzog

While in Albany Tuesday, Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman was unable to confer with Lester Herzog, state director of the WPA, as he had planned to do, to discuss the situation affecting 50 men deprived of working on Kingston projects because of a ruling of the state body.

The men were laid off in December and suspended from relief rolls in January after receiving their WPA earnings. The state rule says that men who work on the WPA must have previously been listed as home relief cases. These cases referred to the mayor said, are still considered needy, but the state ruling leaves them out of work, despite the fact that Arthur Hallinan, head of the Ulster county WPA, has sent in requisitions for more men on the various projects.

Better Luck Soon for Milady When She Buys Silk Stockings

Washington, March 10 (AP).—Milady's problem of making her stockings meet her garters appeared today to be headed toward quick oblivion.

Clipping on this vexing issue, the government and the hosiery trade have decided on a silken leg standard for future hose.

This doesn't mean the stocking makers have turned their backs on the extra-short and extra-long legged women. The production of special models will continue.

It does mean that when an average-legged woman just asks for "stockings," she won't come home with a silken something ranging from socks to hose that resemble wading boots.

The standard idea didn't start with the government but with the hosiery industry, which decided to take the strain off stocking and garter.

Asked to participate in nationalizing the plan, the Bureau of Standards went in as a sort of friendly coordinator, taking this view of forthcoming hose barker:

"Unless mentioned in the order, it is understood that the seller will supply standard lengths and thus put an end to the former practice of a few manufacturers who furnished the shortest lengths except when the retailer ordered something else."

In working out the standard for "full fashioned and circular knit (seamless)," the experts did not use filled stockings, but empty ones. The magic length is 30 inches from the lower end of the heel to garter anchorage.

General O'Ryan Gives Stimulating Speech

General John F. O'Ryan gave a thought-provoking and stimulating speech last evening to an audience estimated at about 300 at the Fair Street Reformed Church.

Taking as his topic, "The Outlook for Our American Life," General O'Ryan listed some of the topics which he considered vital in considering this question. Politics, communism, education, cost of government, unemployment, immigration, state's rights, war, narcotics and social diseases are all fundamental problems related to the inquiry of the topic. In his hour and a quarter address, General O'Ryan was not able to cover all these topics, but those he did cover were frank, "straight-from-the-shoulder" opinions.

The consideration of politics is logical, because in a democracy, whatever is the cure for any or all of these subjects, the remedy must be applied through the instrumentality of politics. The average youth is shocked by his first impression of the people engaged actively in the making or executing of the laws. This reaction is not the result of a definite analysis of character, but rather the result of superficial appearance, which may be deceiving but also may measure the character, wisdom and worth of the individual. As a result, the view taken by the youth of today is that politicians are vulgar, incompetent, insincere and unworthy.

The impression tends to influence a high percentage of earnest and sincere young Americans to stay away from politics and to turn to business. Others go further and conclude that the realm of politics is exciting and worthwhile. Fortunately, neither view is sound, and both are extremes. A third class, which has decided views about politics, frankly takes the middle road and also constitutes indictments based on widespread experience. However, the speaker said that all federal officers and those assisting, are not as bad as youth paints them. The majority possess a higher standard of integrity than those holding similar positions in the states.

General O'Ryan then compared and contrasted those in politics and those in public business.

One of the vital problems of the American public is to keep the government from the fields of business. Where there is abuse in the industrial world, it should be controlled by reasonable measures. Quality minds should be substituted for third rate minds, where they exist.

The next phase of American life discussed by General O'Ryan was that of education. The diploma received at the end of a prescribed course of study is regarded as something akin to a government bond, which may be cashed in for a position. In some mysterious way this is assumed by a great many people. Many look upon education as an avenue to material success with no regard for character formation. The youth of today in the schools is fed information and apparently receives no training, and has no respect for traditions. General O'Ryan formed this opinion as a result of his work as police commissioner in New York city. The high schools, according to the speaker, do not teach the standards of America or of Americans, and he feels that there is something definitely wrong with the educational system. It is impossible to educate a person not capable of education and this fact should be recognized. The school should train, not teach to recite and memorize in order to pass examinations.

Communism, which is a subject of ever increasing interest, also was given consideration. Communism, which was defined as the ownership by a locality of all the property with equal use by the community, will never develop in this country, he said. Ownership here is too widespread. Communism and its apostles have made a great stir here, nevertheless. This can be attributed to several circumstances: First, the novelty of the doctrine, and second, the organized leadership of the fanatical professionals who possess great imaginations. Such professional leadership is very effective with the mob. The organized activity is attractive. The adherents are highly organized in this country, and are working at top speed, the character of which is infecting and poisoning from within. All opposition to this movement should be organized. Such a movement as communism grows where unrest and dissatisfaction exist. One aspect of communism that General O'Ryan thinks unworthy is the fact that it creates unhappiness in the minds of intended converts. Usually the converts are more emotional than the average. "No revolution of the masses is possible in this country," said the speaker.

The subject of war is a very complex one. War is one of the contributing sources to the increase in the number of the insane. A still more significant fact is that for years and generations following a war the work of procreation is left up to the weaker, less intelligent people who are left behind to carry on the work of the strong, worthwhile, young men sent out to be killed.

In closing, General O'Ryan expressed the sincere hope that he had stimulated the interest and desire of his audience to probe further into these questions.

General O'Ryan was introduced by Mrs. William Hasbrouck, president of the Kingston College Women's Club, under whose auspices the address was given. The proceeds of the evening will be used toward the scholarship which the club gives every year to an outstanding girl in the high school.

Final Arrangements for Show Boat March 11

Final arrangements have been completed for "Show Boat," the annual presentation to be given Thursday, March 11, at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the Sisterhood of Temple Emanuel.

From bits of information gleaned from the chairman, this show will prove to be very spectacular. The performance consists of three scenes. "In the Doctor's Office," "The Last of the McGuires," and "Show Boat," a musical review. It is in this latter number that the scenery, under the direction of Joe Kelly, is expected to receive the greatest applause. Much time and effort have been spent in arranging the scene, which is aboard a ship on a southern cruise. The novelty crepe-paper background is especially effective with its moon reflecting on the blue waters. In the distance can be seen a silhouette of a South Sea Isle, complete with palm trees and sail boat.

Helen Mann, chairman of the show, is being assisted by the following committees: Program, Martha R. Levey and Helen Reben; tickets, Mrs. Alfred Ronder; costumes, Mrs. N. B. Gross and Mrs. Eva Kaplan; scenery, Joe Kelly; dances, Ruth Selgel, stage direction, Sam Riber and Joe Kelly; refreshments, Mrs. Samuel Riber and Mrs. Jack Greenwald.

The program for Thursday's evening performance is:
Skit—"In the Doctor's Office," Milton Shiebel, Alfred Lasher and Richard Oheaus
Skit—"The Last of the McGuires," Emanuel Levy, Sidney Spiegel, Ruth Selgel, Irving Schwartz, M. Levine, William Chazanof and David Friedman

Praises of Cathedral Choir Again Sounded

Appropos of the story recently printed in this paper that the boys' choir of All Saints' Cathedral is considered so excellent that it is to make a concert tour with its director, J. Williams Jones, there is a little incident that happened on night at the Albany home of Major John A. Warner, superintendent of the state police, and not only a music lover but a student of note.

The incident led to the following letter to Mr. Jones from Major Warner: "Christmas Eve we had the rare pleasure of listening to the superb broadcast which you had arranged at 11 o'clock. We can't remember having heard a program more flawless in arrangement and execution than that you gave. Our radio had been turned on at 10:30 and we had been waiting for the choir to appear, and when it was put on again we were greeted with something so unusual that we all paused to listen. It was not until the announcer at the close of the period said that it was from All Saints' Cathedral that we knew to whom we were so much indebted. My heartfelt congratulations and I trust it will not be long before we hear some more."

Major Warner's brother, A. J. Warner of Rochester was his guest that night. The latter writing in his column "At Random" in the Rochester Times-Union said: "It is unfortunate that the standard of church music—that is, the singing of boys—falls in America so far short of the work of beauty possible of attainment by this most celebrated of ecclesiastical social 'organs.' There are, of course, numerous exceptions, although these are usually confined to the largest churches like the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and Trinity Church in New York, where the music is famous. The finest example in a provincial American city of what can be done with a boy choir in the way of achieving the purely 'cathedral tone' that is characteristic of boys' voices as they are trained in England to reach my notice is in Albany at the Cathedral of All Saints."

Kingston Music lovers will also have the privilege of enjoying this much praised choir on Tuesday evening, March 16, in the Fair Street Reformed Church.

Miss Margaret M. Schuetz, head of the Home Economics Department of the Kingston High School, will address delegates to the 13th annual Junior High School Conference to be held March 12 and 13 at New York University. Approximately 3,000 persons interested in secondary school education will assemble at the university. They include administrative officers, teachers, and students from nine states. The general theme of the conference will be "Reducing the Economic Waste of Poor Teaching."

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Coutant and daughters, Alice Ruth and Betty Ann, of 101 Roosevelt avenue have returned from a vacation in Florida. Mr. Coutant will continue his refrigeration service business.

The life, childhood romance, and stage success of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne were interestingly given by Mrs. W. N. Fossenden.

Local Man Making Good As Test Pilot

Edward G. Krayem, a son of S. G. Krayem, Strand dry goods merchant, is making a name for himself as a test pilot for the Taylor Aircraft Company of Bradford, Pa.

The latest report of the local man's progress comes from a copy of the Dothan Eagle, a daily paper published in Dothan, Ala., which tells of demonstration flights to be made at the airport last Sunday afternoon for the purpose of convincing the public of the reliability of the modern light airplane. Eddie Krayem was one of the two representatives to fly the "Taylor Cub," the trade name of the ship.

Krayem put his ship through such intricate maneuvers as loops, spins, wing-overs, barrel rolls, and climaxed the performance by flying upside down across the airport.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
When Colored—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Early in the Day
The liver should purify two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks queer.
Laxatives are only makeshifts. A more natural movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 10, 1937

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

Our idea of a diplomatic letter from Secretary Hull to Mr. Hitler about the recent unpleasantness is something like this:

"Dear Mr. Hitler.—The State Department of the United States of America regrets that our Mr. La Guardia's sense of humor has sometimes allowed him to go beyond bounds of good taste as you and I might interpret the term.

"In the United States of America, however, Mr. La Guardia, tact in public officials is somewhat rare. It is a peculiarity of our American life that many men extremely useful in various fields of government seem to be entirely lacking in that desirable quality. There is, moreover, a curious American principle called Freedom of Speech, in accordance with which the Constitution prevents the State Department from interfering with any man's expression of opinion. We have, however, suggested to our Mr. La Guardia that he purchase a volume by our noted adviser, Miss Emily Post, and we trust that he will profit by its perusal.

"In conclusion, dear Mr. Hitler, let me say that nothing any mayor or Congressman says about you, and nothing the Nazi press says about any of our public men, is more than a moonlight whisper of the summer wind. In the poetic language of my native land, you ain't seen nothing yet.

"But if you would really like to know what we can do in the way of plain and fancy cussing, if you would like to hear some oral fireworks which would take the hair off your head and the coat off your back, you just ought to hear what some of our best American minds can do in the way of hawling out the head of our own government.

"Believe me, my dear Mr. Hitler, yours with affectionate regards—"

EXPOSING WAR.

Ernest Hemingway, world war veteran and author of several hard-boiled books, has gone to Spain as a newspaper correspondent with a cause. He intends, he says, to describe war so truly that readers "can see it and hate it as much as any man who has ever seen it hates it." Now is the time to do this, he believes, while the conflict is concentrated in a small area. When the next world war breaks out, "nobody will be able to write that kind of stuff. The propagandist big shots won't let him, and nobody will want to read it anyway, and it'll be too late to do any good." In modern warfare, as Hemingway points out, there are no non-combatants. The helpless aged and infants are targets along with trained soldiers, forts and ammunition dumps.

Mr. Hemingway's articles will not be pleasant reading. If he is able to carry out his purpose of writing the facts about war itself. The causes of the Spanish conflict, the political rows that underlie it, the grasp for power and the general conniving of factions against each other, are perhaps unimportant. What happens when human beings attempt to settle quarrels and rivalries by armed conflict is important.

It will be easy for Hemingway to show the utter horror and uselessness of modern war. Will it ever be easy for statesmen and common people to abandon war for the evil "peace" it is? Not until they do will the war really solve their social and economic problems.

WITHOUT A COUNTRY.

Another of those distressing cases of confused citizenship appears in Boston. Ray Tessler, a Canadian-born mechanic who fought for the United States in the World War, is imprisoned in Montreal and can't get back home.

Tessler has lived in New England for 11 years. He was never naturalized and, consequently, assumed that he was in the United States army made him an American citizen. He left the honor last September and took his wife on a visit to Montreal, expecting to return in two weeks.

On the way home they were stopped at the border in Vermont as aliens. Returning to Montreal, they were told that the Canadian government considered them American citizens. Their money is spent and they are helpless. The worst of it is that since the war Tessler has become blind. Their 16-year-old son is keeping house alone in Boston.

It is surprising how many of these curious cases turn up, and how much confusion and misery they cause. Impersonal governments are often stupid and cruel. Surely there should be more elasticity and more human sympathy in the arrangements for handling such matters.

That Body of Yours

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act)

CHANGES IN SMALL GLAND

"The distinguished old anatomist held up a small bone that looked something like an airplane and then laid it down. He went on to say that it required 4,500 words in 'Gray's Anatomy' to describe the joints with which this bone was connected with other bones, its processes, its grooves, its depressions and fissures, and it was a waste of time to try to master it. The professor picked it up again, however, and described its upper surface, shaped like a Turkish saddle. Lying on or in the upper surface of the saddle is a small gland, about the size of a pea, remnant of an age-long gone in evolution. It is called the pituitary body, and as far as is known, has no function (use) in the body.

That was just fifty-five years ago. I am quoting the late Dr. J. S. Lankford, San Antonio, Texas, in a recent number of Clinical Medicine and Surgery, Chicago.

"Yet today a slight pressure in this little gland, a little deformity, and the whole structure of the body may be changed." Dr. Lankford mentions four classes of symptoms arising from little but important deformities of this pituitary gland.

(1) Those leading to change in form and size of the body.

(2) Those causing central and one-sided headache (migraine).

(3) Those leading to peculiar types of nervousness and emotionalism, sometimes almost to the borderline of insanity, especially dementia praecox—persistent dream state.

(4) Those creating diseases of the eye, even to the point of blindness. The front half of this little gland is the organ of growth. If this gland is normal and active and has plenty of room to lie in the saddle or depression in the bone, the body will be well developed and the figure good. If it is too small and doesn't grow properly the body may be small—even a dwarf. If on the other hand, there is irritation and over-stimulation of the gland pressure, the body may become giant-like in size. The body may take all sorts of shapes according to the activity or non-activity of the gland. Frontal or central headaches, pain through temple, brow, eye and sometimes back of head may result.

Pressure from a deformity of the bone in which the pituitary gland rests may lead to peculiar forms of nervousness and emotionalism together with despondency.

While nothing can change the shape of the bone, the use of pituitary extract when there is insufficient pituitary juice, and the use of other gland extracts when there is too much pituitary juice has, in some cases, "changed the whole course of a life."

EVE'S ORCHARD

By MARGARET WIDDEMER

SYNOPSIS: Eve Manners had gone back to her two-century-old farmhouse and orchard in Connecticut after five years of work and play in New York. She misses gay, slim Denny who was to marry her in a few days if his new job hadn't collapsed. The last tenants left the house very dirty. But quiet, practical George Cleveland, a young fruit experimenter who lives near by Seymour house, and Uncle Henry, an old family friend, help Eve clean and move down the fine old antiques from the attic.

Chapter 12

George's Mother Calls

THE rest of the morning was a whirlwind of getting out furniture from the long attic, carrying it down, placing it in the new room, dust and in spite of her excited over-redness of face, the telephone man and the electric light man incredibly came as promised. Adrienne below, could be heard clearing out the furnace and making a welcome fire with the Jennings' remnant of coal. Eve was scarcely interrupted by them.

"Oh, Uncle Henry, the curvy window sash I used to play Madame Récamier in! Oh, George, look at this. It's the lacquer cabinet I used to use for a doll's house! And my little table and chair for the kitchen—"

"You said the lacquer cabinet used to be in the back parlor, didn't you?" George laid it on a piece of canvas and began dragging it to the attic door.

"Good memory George has," Uncle Henry said dryly. As man and cabinet disappeared down the stairs. This weather's just right for budding and grafting and here he is indoors. You must have got quite a ways along in the city."

She laughed, lifting herself from the barrel which had proved to be the Wedgwood china and not the coffee-foot she wanted. "I only met him one night and he disappointed of my wild ways."

"He's a fine young man," Uncle Henry said hopefully.

"Dear Uncle Henry, just wait till you see my real young man! He's better yet. He's coming out Saturday or Sunday."

"Mph," said Uncle Henry. "Here's the kitchen tin—think you could manage us a bit? Nearly 12.30."

She clattered down with arms full of saucers and found George in the kitchen gravely placing the child's chair and table.

"Odd," he said, straightening up, "that the house you talked about, with the cabinet you played dolls in and the child's chair, should have been the house I couldn't get the picture out of my mind. I think they must go just there."

"They do—are you a wizard?" "Well, no; that's where they would go. I don't know much about old furniture, but you have some pretty good stuff, haven't you? My mother would be interested. I'll bring her over to call if I may, next weekend."

"I'd love it. Yes, I think the furniture is good, though I don't know either; to tell you the truth, I'd forgotten. I'd always lived with it, you see. A lot of it is as old as the house."

TALKS TO PARENTS

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

By the time a child is five he should be acquainted with the dentist and be accustomed to the dentist's chair.

To wait until the first toothache comes on before taking him to the dentist is to court trouble. Of course in this case his first experience in the dentist's chair will hurt and the child will be unwilling to go again.

If he is taken to the dentist early when his teeth are just reaching the place where he can gnash them, he may escape tooth trouble entirely, and he will not be likely to develop a lasting aversion to dentists.

Every six months, as regularly as changes from winter to summer and from summer to winter clothes, he should repeat this visit. No amount of brushing can keep the teeth clean and free from decay. Only a thorough cleaning by the dentist twice a year guarantees that they are in perfect shape.

If the first teeth are carefully guarded and kept in place until they are pushed out by the second, the later expense and discomfort of straightening the teeth and widening the bite which so many children have to go through, may well be avoided.

Some parents may believe they cannot afford to incur dentist bills unless the condition of the child's teeth demands prompt attention. But, in the long run, it will prove wise economy to follow the trend of preventive medicine and avoid later complications which almost certainly will prove far costlier.

Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—In addition to the obvious effect of the action of the steel industry in boosting wages and cutting hours of its half million employees, this startling move may accomplish a lot of other things.

Obviously steel sought to escape labor troubles. Equally obvious was the intention of turning the current of public disapproval which has been running against big industry ever since the New Deal took its stand on the troubles of the little man.

But undercurrents in Washington an effort was seen to lessen the pressure on congressmen for rebuilding the Supreme Court. Mr. Roosevelt's captains in the effort to put through his court revision program have counted on pressure from the farmers and labor. Farm leaders were slow coming to the front with endorsements but John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chieftain, and William Green, president of the A.F.L., stumbled over each other in the rush with pledges of support.

Now steel has come forward with grants accomplishing much of labor's program without tinkering with the court.

Incidental but no doubt recognized by the steel industry is the effect increasing wages has upon sustaining prosperity. The $100,000,000 annually which is estimated to be the amount of the wage increase, otherwise would have been available for capital investments or spending in the stock market, either of which might well swell the boom without any contribution to prolonged prosperity.

Senator Bailey of North Carolina pointed out that two South American republics at war might each have an overseas ally to pour in supplies and arms. The United States, under its neutrality act, would be prohibited from sending munitions to either. The result, Bailey pointed out, might be that a foreign power might get real foothold in America. "What then would be done?" Bailey asked.

"We could send our navy down there," replied Senator Pittman. "You could not send that country any munitions. Cotton might be on the list and you could not send cotton," Bailey insisted.

"I know," said Pittman, "but we would not have to send anything to anybody in a case like that. We would declare that a condition of war existed."

All of which may be startling to Latin Americans who in recent months have been listening to "good neighbor" speeches.

Townfolk Had Big Time at School

Highland, March 10.—Monday evening was a red-letter night at the school building. With the science exhibit held over and attracting sightseers, the large exhibit of hobbies sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association and a talk by William J. Reagan, principal of Oakwood school, Poughkeepsie, on defense of hobbies. The large audience felt that a profitable evening had been spent.

The science exhibit under the supervision of the vice principal and instructor, John J. Gaffney, was open all last week in the gymnasium and attracted many people. Each of the exhibits had its particular interest for someone.

Mr. Gaffney said the display by the Central Hudson Corp. was perhaps the greatest attraction. It consisted of a modern house, completely furnished and lighted from the laundry and game room in the basement to the top floor. Every detail had been worked out. With it was the farm house, barn, milk house, wood shed, with the same detail. It is said that the cost of the production was $3,000. It was built in 1928 and has been in the Tennessee valley for some time.

An electric company had its display of lighting, starting with the iron bowls containing a wick to the present newest electric bulb. Running the series of years were the whale oil lamps, candles, gas fixtures and modern electric lights. There was a beautiful display of candles. Locally there was the Hudson Valley Pure Food Co. with chocolate featured; the Thatcher estate had a large display of shells, as had Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rose. All exhibits had been lettered and put on display cards by the students in the class.

Hobby Exhibits

In the central hall on the first floor was the first of the hobby exhibits. These consisted of stamps, coins collected by Jean Seaman, shells from Sallie Lounsberry, soap carvings by students in the grades and were the first to attract the people entering. In the upper halls came the main exhibit: Mrs. Gladys Mears had the start of a large fan collection; Miss Helen Sykes with her own collection and some added had an exhibit of 53 elephants. The arrangement caused comment by the striking way they were placed; on another table were more than 100 dogs, from furry ones to tiny metal, glass and porcelain specimens. Back of this was a huge poster, the beginning of a large one depicting the horrors of war. In this one was "Disease, Famine and War" being pushed over a cliff. Many long posters and small panel ones were placed in effective positions. Stuffed animals were displayed by Shirley Filkins. A display of pewter plates testified to a love of that line of hobbies. George P. Muller had a table whereon was displayed a painting, stuffed birds, wood carvings and decorated skins; Mrs. J. P. Whitely with a crocheted table cloth and afghan testified to her handwork; W. Barnaby had the beginnings of a long runner of hook work; Mrs. Charles Davis had a large crazy quilt of silks; there were old books, scrap books which scholars and adults had contributed in some way.

In the assembly room was the hobby of the Mid-Hudson Philatelic club in frames, with Oliver T. Tillson in charge were displays of Cayman Islands, King Edward, the National Park issues, Mount Vernon, air mail, Pilgrim Tercentenary, Presidents, New Zealand, Great Britain jubilee and the Queen Victoria memorial issue. Mrs. D. S. Hayes, P. T. A. president, congratulated the committee. Mrs. Ernest Tanner, Mrs. Parker Decker, Mr. Tillson, Mr. Winchester on their efforts and expressed the hope that this was the first of an annual exhibit.

"Use of Leisure Time"

The speaker of the evening, Mr. Reagan, was introduced by the principal of the school, A. Herbert Campbell, and Mr. Reagan spoke on the subject, "Use of Leisure Time." He said that the human body was skill hungry and that boys as scouts were not merely entertained by being taught to tie knots, name trees, make fires, but in this teaching skill was perfected, a hobby developed and courtesy taught.

During the business meeting the treasurer reported that last month the balance was $173.32, to which was added the Founder's Day collection of $2.26; Women's Circle of Holy Trinity Church, $3; P. E. O. Sisterhood, $5; Lions Club, $10. The last three gifts were for the milk fund. The expenses including milk bills for the month totaled $70.28, leaving on hand, $124.70. Miss Frances Williams made the announcement of P. T. A. safety measures broadcast on a New York city station each morning from 7:20 to 8:00 clock, also of the senior class play to be given this evening. Mrs. Philip Whitlow is chairman of the parent education group, and it is hoped that Mr. Martha Peabody's conference will be held nearer than in Kingston. Mrs. Whitlow took the names of those interested in the subject to attend the lectures. Announcement was made of the April meeting, when the subject will be Social Hygiene, in charge of the public health nurse.

Mrs. C. I. Richards. Mrs. Richards will procure a speaker. The program opened by three songs, "Skating Song," "God's World," "Salt Boat," and the closing song was "Brahm's Lullaby." The five young singers were: Leonore Constantino, Joyce Minard, Shirley Filkins, Danny Kurtz, Anthony Altizio, and the accompanist was Mrs. Tamney.

A committee, Mrs. W. Barnaby, Mrs. Ralph Lyons, Mrs. Charles Schmidt, Mrs. John J. Gaffney, Mrs. Harold DuBois, Mrs. James Swift, Mrs. Edmund Finley, Mrs. Borgquist, Mrs. A. B. Merritt, Mrs. Clyde Matthews, the Misses Marie Van Wormer, Helen Sykes, served refreshments.

The Sixth grade received the most votes and was awarded the P. T. A. flag for April.

New York has now received a total of $1,214,137 for administrative costs from January 1, 1935, when federal grants for this purpose first became available, through March 31, 1937.

Girl Bride Goes To Hudson School

Watertown, N. Y., March 10 (AP)—Watertown's girl bride, Mrs. Leona Roshia Dackus was committed to the New York State School for Girls at Hudson today over her tearful protests and without bidding her youthful husband, Stanley S. Dackus, good bye.

She left a children's court hearing yesterday terming him a "yellow-back" for his absence from the courtroom while her mother, Mrs. Mary Roshia, blamed the 19-year-old bridegroom "for all our troubles."

Leona protested when Judge Harold F. Porter issued an order committing her to the state institution.

"Judge," she said, "I know girls they send to Hudson have good names before they went to Hudson and when they come back they have rotten names." Judge Porter assured her that all girls sent to Hudson did not turn out bad pointing out that it was up to the girl.

At one point, Leona broke into tears to tell the court that "what I can't understand is that they have my father and mother and brother, Joe, all arrested for perjury and they have let Stanley Dackus go free. Why don't they charge him with perjury, too. He lied about his age at Carthage."

The couple were married at Carthage in January.

Col. F. B. Keech Dies Under Subway Cars, Was Free on Bail

New York, March 10 (AP)—Indictment charging arson against Col. Frank Browne Keech, once known as the "Prometheus of the stock market," was nullified today by the West Point graduate's death under the wheels of a subway train.

Veteran of two wars, and cited by President Wilson for distinguished service as a port inspector at Newport News, Va., the man who once estimated his firm's yearly business at $2,000,000 was killed at the 51st Street station of the East Side subway yesterday.

Four cars passed over his body.

Only 12 days before, Colonel Keech, a member of the 1890 class at the military academy, had been indicted on the allegation that he burned his 30-room mansion at fashionable Tuxedo Park, February 26, 1932. The colonel was known as one of the most lavish entertainers in the colony established by Pierre Lorillard, tobacco king.

The fire was put down as accidental for several years and only after the indictment did District Attorney Henry Hirschberg of Orange county announce his belief that the mansion had been insured for $232,000 and burned for a settlement of $170,000.

Associates said Keech rose to prominence in the market through skillful handling of Bethlehem Steel stock. He had been a director of several large companies and at one time was president of the Maryland Society of New York.

At the time of his death Col. Keech was free in $50,000 bail.

Charles F. Smith, once chauffeur for the broker, is under a similar indictment. The district attorney, who had intended to contend Keech used Smith to burn the mansion, indicated he might drop the charge against the chauffeur in view of Keech's death.

Kingston has a lot of promising young men—according to the bill collectors.

Some men who cast their bread upon the waters expect it to come back in the form of a steak sandwich.

She—I'd like some soap, please. Handsome Clerk—We have just one thing for that delicate peach blossom complexion—

She—Oh, it's not soft soap I want.

Love is the flavoring extract in the cream of life.

Tourist (having looked over history castle, to butler)—I've made a stupid mistake. I tipped his lordship instead of you.

Butler—That's awkward. I'll never get it now.

We don't care how much a man says if he only says it in a few words.

New Mother—Oh, Fred, the baby has swallowed the matches! What shall I do?

New Daddy—Here, use my cigaret lighter.

She was a good cook as cooks go,
and as cooks go, she went.

Stranger—How many in your family, lady?

Woman—Just my husband and I.

Stranger—No children?

Woman—No.

Stranger—Any cats or dogs?

Woman—No, sir.

Stranger—Do you have a radio?

Woman—No, we do not.

Stranger—Any other musical instruments?

Woman—Indeed not. But why all these questions? Are you taking the census, or are you a tax assessor?

Stranger—No, lady. I'm just the man who intends to rent the house next door.

A movie comedienne says she even walked the straight and narrow path even before it was paved.

She—My face is my fortune.
He—Well, never mind that. The richest people aren't always the happiest.

All the jewelers love a lover.

Teacher—If a number of cattle is called a herd, and a number of sheep is called a flock, what would a number of camels be called?

Little Boy—A carton.

Satisfaction

There's no thrill in easy sailing, when the sky is clear and blue;
There's no joy in merely doing things which anyone can do.
But there is some satisfaction that is mighty sweet to take,
When you reach a destination that you thought you couldn't make.

Friend—Do Englishmen understand American slang?

Hudson—Some of them do. Why?

Friend—My daughter is to be married in London and the earl has cabled me to come across.

It is true that the chronic shopper doesn't buy much, but just look at all the practice she furnishes for the clerks.

Convincer—I am here for having five wives.

Visitor—How do you enjoy your liberty?

Many people who buy articles from door-to-door canvassers might be checked if they were to take them down and compare them for price and quality with articles in lo-that buying from local stores, it is possible to make exchanges, impossible with the out-of-town peddler.

The WORLD of STAMPS

The head of King George II, who spent 11 years in exile, is strikingly engraved in his relief effect on the new issue from Greece.

George II was recalled to the throne following a plebiscite in 1935. These are the first stamps to bear his portrait.

The storminess of Greek politics has caused several ups and downs for the Glucksburg dynasty since that calm day in 1890 when George was born at Tatou, the royal villa near Athens. He is the eldest son of the late King Constantine. When Constantine was first deposed in 1917, the allies would not permit George to succeed him. They thought he liked the Germans too well. They preferred his younger brother, Alexander.

Constantine got his throne back in 1920. The next year George married Princess Elizabeth, daughter of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Rumania. A revolution deposed Constantine again and George ascended the throne with his bride in 1922.

A counter-revolution failed in 1923 and Greece grew too warm for the King. He and the queen left in December, 1923. In March the assembly deposed the dynasty and a plebiscite confirmed the vote. The republic lasted until 1935, and now the Glucksburgs are back again.

Four values of the George II stamps have been received so far: 1-drachma green, 3-d brown, 8-d deep blue and 100-d rose red.

For U. S. Albums

Collectors of U. S. can add four new stamps in their albums—the 3-cent denominations of the army-navy set and the 20 and 50-cent transpacific airmails.

Of the usual purple shade, the 3-cent army-navy stamps continue this set's illustrations of national service heroes. On the army stamps are heads of Generals Sherman, Grant and Sheridan in oval frames. Grant's picture is centered. The navy stamp depicts Admirals Farragut (left) and Porter (right). Between them sails a warship of their period.

The transpacific airmails adopt the design of the 25-cent blue, but omit the date—November, 1935. That was the date when air mail service to the Philippines started. Now it is being extended to the coast of China.

World Notes

The London stamp market is reported experiencing a shortage of rare issues. This is thought to be due to demands from America and France. At the same time values have been going up. An Egyptian stamp recently listed at 20 cents is now priced 75.

Costa Rica has issued three diamond-shaped stamps to commemorate its first national fair. They picture a plane flying over Poas volcano. Values are 1-centavo slate, 2-cent red brown, and 3-cent purple.

Germany has withdrawn from postal sale the commemoratives issued in 1935. These are the Saar jubilee, war heroes, juvenile workers' athletic games, Bach-Handel, railroad, Hitler youth, Nazi conference and Munich "putch" issues.

Rifton Ladies' Aid

The Rifton Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, March 3, at the home of Mrs. Claude Davis. The ladies were especially happy to have with them one of their members who is not always able to be with them, namely, Mrs. Amy Anderson, and hope she will be able to attend many more meetings in the future. The Aid is planning to have a cafeteria supper on March 31, at Rifton Hall, and a special meeting to discuss final plans for same will be held on Wednesday, March 24, at the home of Mrs. Edward Baile. All members are urged to be present at this meeting.

And We Mean "Avenue"

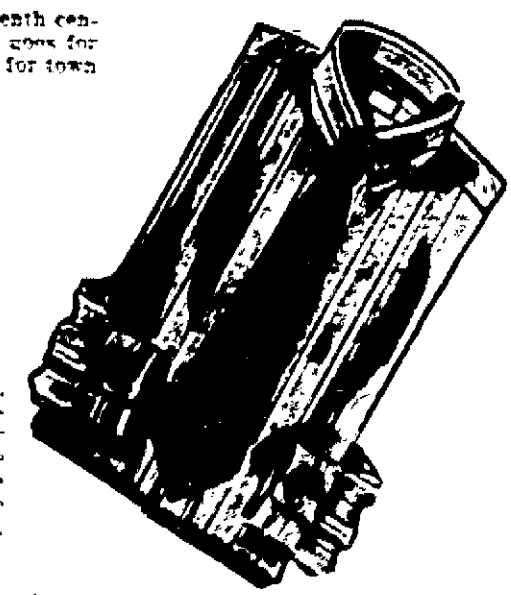

FLAG DAY doesn't come till June and we don't see any troops, but perhaps the national colors have been unfurled just for this lone leader in the Spring Style Parade. His whole get-up denotes nothing short of leadership. The grey bombur, worn fairly straight upon the head, goes well with the conservative grey herringbone topcoat. The suit in dark blue is a rather new note in that its fabric is a basket weave serge. Instead of worsted or cheviot. A spaced stripe shirt with white starched collar and dark solid color tie cannot be improved upon, but the two other shirts below are worthy substitutes in good taste.

The dickey shirt harks back to late nineteenth century in this demi-bosom style. The same goes for turtlows, but now enjoys returning favor for town and the dark satin tie.

There is plenty of punch, both literally and fashion-wise, in the angular wing-tip heavy calf shoe the neatness of this style here shown. Also note of lacing. Try it yourself.

English shirt-makers are casting heavy votes for this wide-spread collar on shirts carrying the new, fairly long point lounce collar, worn without a collar pin. Do not wear a striped tie with this shirt.

Dumm Lists Youth Problems

Clarence Dumm in a message to the ministers' association last Friday afternoon at three P. M. C. A. listed the "greatest problems among youth in the high school today," as follows:

Increase in attendance of those of non-scholastic ability.

Lessening of church contacts.

Decrease of the influence of the home.

Need of training in the use of leisure time.

He said the first has been caused by the steady increasing rise in age for compulsory education, whereas formerly young people did things upon farms they today live in cities with much leisure time and are limited in opportunities for productive work. Adolescence needs the right to work with the hands.

The second has been caused by parental disinterest, he continued. The great need today is a vital experience with the church and a wholesome environment at home. The tendency among parents is to disown responsibility. The advice given was to make the church program attractive and give more responsibility to the young people. Learning is by doing good rather than by being good, he concluded.

HIGH FALLS.

High Falls, March 9.—The March meeting of the Mothers' Club will be held at the school house library on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Barnhart of Stone Ridge called at the home of Miss Jessie Snyder Friday evening. The members of the Ladies' Aid were entertained at the home of Mrs. Ellis Brices recently.

Mrs. Mary McArdle is staying at the home of Mrs. Alexander Stokes. Marvin Van Wagenen has been helping John Ayers with his sheep and lambs.

All present at the Reformed Church last Sunday, heartily welcomed Mr. and Mrs. George LeFever at the service. The ill health of Mrs. LeFever has kept them at home all winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Barnhart and Dennis of Kingston took dinner with their mother, Mrs. J. M. Barnhart, Sunday evening.

The Sunday School is very grateful for the substantial new chairs placed in their meeting room, the basement of the Reformed Church, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Krom.

An election of officers was held. Harold Riley of Sawkill was elected president, Miss Ellen Sheehan of Ruby, vice president; Miss Margaret Shortell, treasurer, and Dennis Sheehan of Ruby, secretary. All voted to take an active part with arrangements for the floor show and dance to be held in the Knights of Columbus Hall at Kingston on the evening of March 19. It is expected that one of the largest gatherings ever to attend a function in this hall will turn out. The proceeds of this event will be used to finance the repairs made to St. Ann's, Sawkill.

The hall will be ready for use next week due to the response of the men of both parishes, both Catholic and non-Catholic, who have given their time gratis to make this possible. The hall has been raised several feet and a cellar dug underneath where a kitchen and washrooms will be placed. Concrete foundations have been put in and also new floors and tiles throughout the building. New windows and a double door have been placed in the front of the building. It is hoped that both the inside and the outside will be painted in the near future.

This morning, work was started in St. Ann's Church by William Riley of Kingston, who will paint the interior and altars of the church. It is hoped to have the interior of the Ruby Church painted before Easter.

PAINT PORCH FURNITURE

Porch time soon! Let's dress up the old porch furniture in new paint to make it fresh and sparkling as spring itself.

We can borrow a gay color scheme from the garden—daffodil yellow, vibrant tulip red, soft refreshing leaf green.

The table top, alas, shows heat rings and stains from bygone lunches and dinners. So clean off the old finish down to the bare wood with chemical paint remover. When dry, apply a prepared oil finish and rub, rub, rub. Repeat at weekly intervals for a beautiful heat-and-stain-resistant table top.

Now give chairs and lower part of the table a bath of weak soda, a clear rinse and a good rubdown. Let dry 48 hours, sandpaper rough spots, dust off, start painting. A red table edge supplies bright contrast with yellow legs and a bit of red trim. Paint chairs yellow with water-proof fabric cushions in green. If you've a glider give it a green body with red trim and red awning-stripe cushions. And don't forget yellow flower boxes for the porch rail.

One under coat of flat paint and one finishing coat of enamel for furniture that's been painted before. If you have a terrace or open porch, use high-grade house paint for both coats. Then, rain or shine, your furniture will come "smilin' through."

Our 40-page booklet, HOW TO PAINT AND REFINISH FURNITURE, shows clever tricks for doing over old pieces. Fresh color schemes, professional finishes.

Send 15c for our booklet, HOW TO PAINT AND REFINISH FURNITURE, to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Institute, 109 West 13th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

WHAT TO DO FOR ECZEMA ITCHING AND BURNING

Wash the affected parts with Resinol Soap and warm water to soften scales and crusts. Resinol Soap is suggested because it contains no excess of free alkali, and is especially suited to tender skin. Dry by patting with a soft cloth—do not rub.

Doctors recommend an ointment because it penetrates the outer layers of the skin more effectively. Resinol Ointment meets this requirement, and does even more. For over 40 years it has been and still is successfully used to relieve quickly the itching and burning of eczema. It contains soothing ingredients that heal.

Use Resinol Ointment today and enjoy comfort tomorrow. Get a jar also a cake of Resinol Soap, at any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 1, Baltimore, Md.

Television Beauties Require Brown And Orange Make-Up

MOUTH PENCILLED IN

FACE HEAVILY POWDERED

HAIR FLUFFED OUT

Here is how a girl is made up for the television camera in the NBC studios. Brown lipstick is used as red would show up white. Hair must be fluffed out to prevent an appearance of baldness.

TELEVISION ACTRESS
A television demonstration by Philco was combined with a fashion show recently, and showed a pert miss in a "television bathing suit."

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
(Associated Press Radio Editor)

New York—The television beauty is on the way and, thanks to make-up, she may surpass even the comeliest movie queens. She'll have an exaggerated sun tan with a luscious mouth, gorgeous hair and large lustrous eyes.

Right now she's developing in the experimental field tests RCA engineers are conducting.

Oranges and browns predominate in television make-up which has to be different because the electric camera is choosy about certain colors. Red shows up white, hence brown lipstick is used with just enough red for feminine vanity.

Ready for the Air

Betty Goodwin, NBC staff writer used considerably in the tests, tells how the make-up man prepares her for the air:

"First, he places an even coating of orange-tinted foundation cream all over my face.

"Then my mouth is pencilled in, a bit larger than natural and with a dark reddish brown lip rouge. The outline is made with a fine brush, then the color is solidly filled in.

"Of course, nicely shaped black eyebrows are essential to accentuate the eyes, even for blondes like me. A brush puts them on.

"This part completed, a heavy layer of orange-tinted powder kneads on, with the surplus brushed off. There must be no shine on my face, or the camera will pick it up. After that, a final patting to be sure the surface is evenly powdered.

"Finally, my hair is brushed and fluffed out, to catch the studio lights. Tightly combed hair makes one look bald."

Announcers Make Up, Too

When she acts, she must go through her part without a stop, for there can be no retakes in television as in the movies.

Even the male announcers must wear make-up.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—They would have you believe, on the Metro lot, that Sam Wood's facial expressions on the set are due to his efforts to show the Marx boys how, in other words, they tell you, he has become a fourth Marx brother.

This may be true, for the hard-working Wood likes to go through the motions with his actors. But privately I have a hunch, since boys will be boys and so will Marxes, that there is some more deeply rooted cause.

Wood had the good fortune—or hard luck—to make a hit of the last Marx film, "A Night at the Opera," and therefore was logical choice for their current essay, "A Day at the Races." With this vehicle he has lived, eaten and slept these many months, long before it hit the shooting stage, even before it went on the road for test performances in key cities.

Watch him on the set, and you see a man who works tensely. This scene, for instance, wherein Groucho has been cowering on the dance floor with blonde Esther Muir while long-suffering Margaret Dumont, the Groucho stooge, looks on indignantly.

Wood goes in there to trip lightly, in Groucho style, through the steps. He orders a "take" finally, and while the camera turns he crouches beside it like a football tackle ready to spring. He pushes back his hat, a moment later pulls it down again, then pushes it back once more, and mops his brow with his handkerchief. He alternately scowls, smiles and grimaces. The smiles are there when the scene is done perfectly, and he relaxes then, becomes the genial Sam of the days when less strenuous films were his lot.

"It's the timing," he once told me, "that makes comedy tough."

Franks A Worry

What seems to make the Marxes tough, however, is not so much their offstage pranks as their production for disappearing.

From other sources you hear that Wood is a master at keeping the "boys" in line and on the mark. But Harpo still occasionally disappears, necessitating a canvass of all the telephones on the lot to discover at which he is planted in conference with his bookie.

Today

Broadway: "We Who Are About to Die." Penned by a man in the death house at California while awaiting his turn to die, this movie is a true case history of death as it is anticipated by human beings who must pay the penalty for murder. A best selling novel, the screen play has been somewhat altered into a melodrama of unusual power and its climax is reached when the man is found not guilty of his crime. A cautious blend of fact and fancy, this problem picture is tense, gripping screen fare. The cast includes John Beal, Preston Foster and Ann Dvorak.

Kingsport: "Mysterious Crossing." Dangerous situations crop up with astounding regularity in the feature at the Kingsport, a thrill drama of strange adventure with James Dunn and Jean Rogers co-starring. The element of mystery is well sustained from start to ending with the added complement of misunderstood intentions which triumph despite the trickery of the plot. It's one of those plays constructed entirely for the purpose of fast paced entertainment and it manages to achieve its aim.

Orpheum: "The General Died at Dawn." Clifford Odets' first effort in picture dramatization is a skillful, terrorizing and eminently successful piece of writing. The youthful Broadway playwright has achieved a signal triumph in this story of modern China where roving warlords keep the populace in a constant state of fear. Into the intrigue of civil war comes an American, bent on halting a shipment of arms to one of the powerful generals. The situations are models of suspense as the main characters buck their way through a plot of electrifying interest. The work of Gary Cooper and Madeline Carroll is excellent, but the portrayal of the Chinese general by Akim Tamiroff is the standout characterization of the film. A don't miss attraction.

Tomorrow

Broadway: Same.

Kingsport: "Arizona Mahony" and "Criminal Lawyer." Another of Zane Grey's prolific tales of the west becomes fairly adequate screen fare with the humorous Joe Cook in the starring role. It's the story of a funny man who changes the standards of the Arizona cattle country. "Criminal Lawyer" is the other feature, a story of vice and the law with Lee Tracy and Margot Grahame featured.

Orpheum: Same.

Shultis in Official Visit to Kingston Masonic Lodge, 10

Three past deputy grand masters and a dozen or more masters and past masters of lodges in the Greene-Ulster Masonic district assisted in paying honor to R. W. Charles E. Shultis of Preston Hollow, Greene county, the present district deputy grand master, who made his official visit to Kingston Lodge No. 10, F. & A. M., Tuesday night.

The former deputy grand masters present were Roger H. Loughran, J. William Feeter and Samuel Stern. Deputy Grand Master Shultis brought to the lodge a message from Jacob C. Kilnk, grand master of Masons of the state of New York, impressing among other things a need for maintaining the high ideals of the order. He concluded his address with some interesting references to an incident in the early history of Masonry in the state of New York and which, unjustly, in view of the true facts, in the case worked many hardships upon members of the order for a period of years.

In the absence of Edward M. Stanbrough, master of No. 10, who is still confined to his home with illness, Samuel D. Scudder, Jr., presided during the evening.

Preceding the meeting the deputy grand master was entertained at dinner at the Stuyvesant Hotel by officers of No. 10. He was accompanied by H. M. Wilsie, master, and S. N. Haskins and C. Hess, past masters of Oak Hill Lodge of Catskill. Among officers of the Kingston Lodge present were Roger H. Loughran, Charles F. Liebert, Thomas Liebert, Roy L. Brower, E. W. Kearney, Clifford I. Carnright, Frederick Buchholz.

Fear of Water Crisis On Long Island Told In Recent Report

For some time the city of New York has been securing a great amount of water for supplying the Brooklyn area from wells on Long Island and now it is feared the water supplies of Nassau and Suffolk counties will be destroyed by over-pumping from these underground beds by water companies supplying Brooklyn and Queens and by industrial establishments, according to a recent report filed with the legislature by the State Water Power and Control Commission.

Pending completion of the upper Rondout and Delaware water project by New York city the commission feels that the city should extend its water sources to Suffolk county where immense resources are available and practically untouched but the commission feels that the city should not be permitted to obtain any additional permanent wells and rights in Nassau and Suffolk counties. The supply there it is contended should be preserved for the smaller communities which have no recourse to other sources such as the great city of New York has.

Previous Discussion

This matter of depletion of water on Long Island came up for discussion a few years ago when the city of New York made application for permission to pump water from the Rondout creek directly into the Ashokan reservoir aqueduct at High Falls to augment the emergency supply from wells on Long Island. At that time it was stated the wells on Long Island would ultimately become exhausted since the pumping put a greater demand on the water supply than could be replaced by nature. This would eventually deplete the fresh water supply in the soil and the salt water from the ocean would creep in and eventually a brackish water would replace the present fresh water underlying the area.

Kingston objected to the pumping of water from the Rondout creek on the theory that it would reduce the flow of water in the creek during low water periods to such an extent that the lower creek would not have sufficient flow to clear out sewage which was emptied into the creek by the city. Along the creek opposition was also expressed by property owners and boarding house keepers in the boarding house areas who stated that additional water taken by New York would deprive them of proper water supply and bathing facilities for guests.

Project Abandoned
The project was abandoned and apparently New York has extended its pumping system on Long Island to meet the emergency. The development of the Delaware water project, the first step of which is the construction of the Lackawack dam at Lackawack in Ulster county, will provide New York city with an additional supply but it will be ten years before this supply is developed. The report of the State Water Power and Control Commission to the legislature states that unless some action is taken promptly to remedy the situation, the beds under Brooklyn will first be destroyed and then Queens and eventually those under Nassau and even Suffolk counties.

One of the solutions the commission feels is the giving of authority to the commission by legislation for regulation of the overdraft and to rectify the present ill-considered distribution of pumpage.

Wells Overdrawn
For some years, the report states, wells in Brooklyn have been heavily overdrawing the supply under that borough with a consequent drying up or salting of many wells. In Queens the limit of the underground supply is being reached and even in Nassau in some parts the supply has been adversely affected because of the intercommunicating underground supplies.

Announcements Committee

The members of the announcements committee for the senior class of 1937 were posted recently. This honorary body has charge of the traditional announcement cards to be presented by members of the graduation class. The committee was appointed by President Frank O'Hara of the senior class, and consists of Dorothy Tancred as chairman, with Agnes Chmura and William Wall as members of the group.

Athletic Awards

Forty-one girls who competed in the intermar basketball league during their high school careers are slated to receive insignia as a reward for their efforts. The awards are based on continual competition in the girls' athletic program for at least three years. Two major insignias of six inch "K's" were awarded to Lillian Naccarato and Penelope Tatters. Five inch letters awarded for four years of competition will be given to Anna Almay, Ruth Butler, Betty Clarke, Jean Eaton, Dorothy Erman, Edna Garit, Charlotte Haines, Emma Hoffbauer, Ruth Howat, Blanche Kirschbaum, Caroline Laros, Hilma Michael, Priscilla Nolan, Evelyn Oliver, Harriet Rice, Caroline Ryder, Bernice Robinson, Rose Silverberg, Leona Soper, Ethel Stark, Ethel Styles, Dorothy Tancred, Marjorie Tease, Catherine Weirich and Mary Whiteley. Four inch emblems for three years' action will be presented to Elvina Calvo, Rose Campbell, Eleanor Countryman, Virginia Dittes, Virginia Evers, Rita Farnitz, Helen Flicker, Ruth Hiedler, Catherine Kachowski, Marie McDonough, Dorothy Messinger, Christobel Murphy, Dorothy Rowe, Helen Smith and Irene Sunklad.

Requests Diplomas Arrive

Mr. Dunn stated that the state requests diplomas, which were earned by students graduating in the June, 1936, exercises, have arrived from the state department at Albany. The diplomas are not yet ready for distribution to last June's graduates, but will be available in a short period. Definite announcement will be made through these columns as to the exact date when the diplomas will be ready for distribution.

Industrial plants draw water from wells on their property. The great number of theatres, restaurants and plants which are being air conditioned draw a large part of their water supply for this purpose from wells.

The entire population of Nassau and Suffolk counties receive its water, except for a few minor surface sources, from sub-surface beds.

Sources of Water

In the report sent the legislature it is stated that while Long Island has ample supply of water for all of the boroughs, unfortunately the supply is being taken all from underground sources at the extreme westerly end of the island while the middle or easterly end of the island is untouched. The report states that the highest possible development of ground water sources on the entire island, properly managed and distributed, would yield only 620,000,000 gallons per day. The present draft is only 219,000,000 gallons a day but the sources are improperly distributed. From one area in Brooklyn there is being pumped daily 62,000,000 gallons while the safe draft there is 40,000,000 gallons a day.

Section of Report

At one point in the report the commission says: "The City of New York has just begun operations to develop Delaware river sources for additional water. It will be at least ten years before any water from this source will reach the city. Meanwhile the Croton and Catskill supplies are furnishing all the water for Manhattan and the Bronx and more than 60 per cent of the water used in Brooklyn and Queens. The Catskill and Croton sources could not supply the sections of Brooklyn and Queens now being supplied from Long Island sources should these sources fail."

"Until such time and the Delaware river supply reaches the city, therefore, it appears that the natural proceeding should be for the city of New York to extend its source of water supply to Suffolk county, where immense resources of water are virtually untouched. Any extension of the mains of the city, however, would be vigorously opposed by Nassau and Suffolk counties, and the commission itself has stated that the city of New York should not be allowed to obtain additional permanent wells and rights in these counties."

Harold Canfield Is Hurt at Auditorium

Harold Canfield, popular young violinist, and a member of the Kingston High School basketball squad, sustained a broken bone in his shoulder during a practice session at the municipal auditorium on Monday afternoon.

Young Canfield, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Canfield of Highland Avenue, was taking part in scrimmaging when he fell to the floor, striking his shoulder. At the time of the accident it was thought that he had not suffered any severe injury, but an X-ray at the Kingston Hospital yesterday morning showed one of the small bones in the shoulder to be broken. Dr. Chester B. Van Gaasbeek is the attending physician.

The idea of a broken shoulder did not dampen Canfield's spirits much, since he is still on his feet taking an active part in many programs. However, his basketball career for the season is ended.
